Why upgrade to a robot vacuum in 2026?

Today’s robot vacuums combine laser or camera-based navigation with powerful suction, smart-home integration, and optional mopping. They save time on daily upkeep, help control pet hair and allergens, and can empty their own bins—making them a practical upgrade for busy households.

What key factors should you compare?

- Suction power – measured in Pascals (Pa) or air watts; higher numbers pick up embedded dirt and pet hair better.
- Navigation technology – LiDAR, vSLAM, or camera-based systems affect how well the robot maps rooms and avoids obstacles.
- Battery life & runtime – determines how large an area can be cleaned per charge; aim for at least 90 minutes for medium-sized homes.
- Mopping capability – a separate water tank and microfiber pad add light-mopping for hard floors.
- Self-empty dock – automatically transfers debris to a larger bin, reducing manual emptying frequency.
- App control & voice assistants – scheduling, no-go zones, and cleaning reports via Wi-Fi.
- Noise level – quieter models (under 60 dB) keep the home peaceful.

Problem: You want a robot that both vacuums and mops, but you hate emptying the dustbin after every run.

Agitate: Models without a self-empty feature require frequent bin emptying, especially in pet-friendly homes, interrupting the hands-free promise.

Solution: The Roomba 115X Combo with AutoEmpty Dock (ASIN B0H34W2MS8) pairs a 2-stage suction system (up to 2,200 Pa) with a vibrating mop pad and a dock that holds up to 30 days of debris. Current sale price (checked Oct 5 2026) is $199.99 (down from $469).

iRobot Roomba 115X Combo Robot Vacuum & Mop (no AutoEmpty Dock)

If you prefer a lower upfront cost and don’t mind manual emptying, the same vacuum-mop core is available without the dock. Suction stays at 2,200 Pa, mopping performance is identical, and the price is around $149.99. You’ll need to empty the bin after each cleaning cycle, which can be several times a week in homes with pets.

Shark AI Ultra – Our Top Pick for 2026

Why it wins: After side-by-side testing, the Shark AI Ultra (see current price) outperforms the Roomba combo in three key areas:

- Suction: Peak 2,700 Pa – noticeably better on deep-carpet pet hair.
- Navigation: Dual LiDAR + vSLAM creates accurate maps faster and avoids obstacles like cords and pet bowls.
- Self-empty: The included AutoEmpty Dock holds up to 60 days of debris, double the Roomba’s capacity.

Battery life runs 110 minutes on a single charge, enough for a 1,800-sq-ft home. The mopping module uses a vibrating pad and adjustable water flow, delivering light-mopping that leaves hard floors streak-free.

How to decide which model is right for you

If you want the absolute best suction, longest self-empty interval, and the smartest navigation, go with the Shark AI Ultra. If budget is tighter and you don’t mind emptying the bin yourself, the Roomba 115X Combo without the dock offers solid vacuum-mop performance at a lower price.
