What Are the Main Differences?

- Roomba 115X Combo + AutoEmpty Dock – $199.99, holds 60 days of debris.
- Roomba 115X Combo – $139.99, great for quick wins.
- Shark AI Ultra – $249.99, bulkier bin, sharp LiDAR.

All three boast a 4-star+ rating but have distinct strengths: the AutoEmpty Dock frees you from sticky bin-changing, while the Shark's LiDAR hugs walls better on dark cockpits.

How Do Navigation Platforms Compare?

The Roomba 115X uses Apple's new vSLAM camera and infrared patches called PrecisionNavigation to map floors and remember where it left off. It can store up to three floor plans in the iRobot Home+ app, ideal for multi-floor homes.

The Shark AI Ultra relies on a laser-based LiDAR paired with ultrasonic wall sensors—AI Laser Navigation—which excels on low-light, dark flooring, giving tighter wall hugging in corners.

Both robots let you draw virtual no-go zones and offer voice-assistant integration (Alexa, Google Assistant). The difference? When a doorway is muddy and reflective, the Roomba's vSLAM may wobble a bit, while the Shark's LiDAR pins the edge more precisely.

Which One Will Serve You Best?

Short-on-budget, long-horizon? Pick the Roomba without the dock—you'll get a solid clean for $140 and can add a dock later.

Need a hands-free, low-maintenance solution? The Roomba with AutoEmpty Dock gives 60 days of dust for only an extra $60.

Demolishing deep-thickness rugs? The Shark AI Ultra delivers the best suction for thick carpets and is priced at $250.

What Do Buyers Say?

- Roomba reviews: 5,217 stars rating 4.4/5 – users love the auto-empty feature and quiet operation.
- Shark reviews: 23,990 customers, 4.0/5 – praised for wall-tracing and big bin capacity.

Both are top-rated in their segment and have been validated by thousands of everyday households.
