Roomba 115X With AutoEmpty Dock vs. Without — Quick-Start Differences

iRobot Roomba 115X Combo Robot Vacuum & Mop

iRobot Roomba 115X Combo Robot Vacuum & Mop with AutoEmpty Dock

Both Roomba 115X models run on the same high-performance core: PrecisionVision Navigation tags, a vSLAM-powered map generator, a triple-stage suction system, and a vibrating mopping pad that tackles sticky spots.

What sets the two apart is the dock – and the workload you'll carry.

- Roomba 115X Combo + AutoEmpty Dock (sold with our affiliate link) – The dock automatically empties the robot's 0.5-liter bin into a sealed bag that holds up to 60 days of debris. That turns bin-emptying from a weekly to a monthly chore. The dock doubles as the charging station and features extra-large contacts for a 20-minute faster recharge.
- Roomba 115X Combo (standard) (sold with our affiliate link) – A basic charging dock that requires you to manually empty the bin after every cleaning cycle. On a typical 1,200 sq ft home, that means clearing the bin every 2–3 runs.

Current prices (as of October 5, 2026):

- AutoEmpty Dock model: $199.99 (slashed from $469.99)
- Standard Combo model: $139.99 (slashed from $319.99)

The $60 premium buys you hands-free bin management, a larger collection bag, and a charging dock that keeps your robot powered up for maximum uptime.

For busy households or pet owners, the AutoEmpty Dock cuts the chore of bin-emptying from weekly to monthly. If you're okay with a quick "dump-and-go" routine, the Standard Combo still delivers identical suction and mopping performance.

Suction Power, Mapping, and Smart Navigation — Roomba 115X vs. Shark AI Ultra

Both robovacs are top contenders, but they approach performance differently.

Raw Suction Power

- iRobot Roomba 115X Max Power: 1,800 Pa (peak)
- Shark AI Ultra Turbo: 2,050 Pa (peak)

In real-world use, peak numbers overestimate street-level grit. In carpeted rooms, expect roughly 60–70 % of the max. That translates to about 1,100 Pa for the Roomba and 1,300 Pa for the Shark on medium-pile rugs.

Smart Navigation & Avoidance

The Roomba 115X uses PrecisionVision cameras coupled with vSLAM to map your home and identify obstacles—shoe s tubs, pet waste, cords—so it can avoid or skirt them in real time. The Shark AI Ultra leverages a front-mounted LIDAR system and an array of ultrasonic sensors to create a low-latency, machine-learning-enhanced map that instantly updates when furniture moves.

A snapshot of real-world ratings: the Roomba averages 4.4/5 across 5,217 reviews, while the Shark Ultra holds a community-review score of 4.6/5 from 2,400 owners.

Conclusion

- If you value hands-free bin management and want to put the robot on autopilot, the Roomba 115X Combo + AutoEmpty Dock is the clear winner.
- For the high-end Suction Power you're willing to pay extra for, the Shark AI Ultra delivers slightly better pickup on deep-pile carpets and offers a more dynamic navigation system for cluttered spaces.
- Both models support mopping, but the Roomba's vibrating pad is more effective on sticky spills, whereas the Shark's pad excels on hard-surface shine.
