Insignia 50-inch F50 Series – The Budget-Friendly 4K Starter

Price (Oct 2 2026): $159.99 (was $299.99)

Rating: 4.3 ★ from 14,032 reviews

- 50″ class LED-backlit 4K UHD (3840×2160)
- 60 Hz refresh, Fire TV OS, Alexa voice remote
- 3 HDMI ports

Why it works: It’s the most affordable way to get a true 4K picture, and the built-in Fire TV eliminates the need for an extra streaming stick.

What to watch for: Detailed performance metrics (peak brightness, local dimming) aren’t published, so expect solid everyday viewing rather than HDR-cinema levels.

Insignia 75-inch F50 Series – Big Screen, Same Price-Point Philosophy

Price: $359.99 (was $399.99)

Rating: 4.3 ★ from 14,032 reviews

- 75″ class LED-backlit 4K UHD
- 60 Hz, Fire TV OS, Alexa remote
- 3 HDMI ports

Why it works: You get the largest screen among the three options for under $360 – a true bargain for movie nights or gaming on a big canvas.

What to watch for: Again, specific brightness/contrast numbers aren’t listed; the panel is best suited for bright rooms where absolute black levels aren’t critical.

LG 55-inch LX7B Gallery Mini LED – Premium Picture in a Designer Frame

LG 55" LX7B Gallery Mini LED 4K Smart TV White Frame Bundle + HDMI

Price: $899.99

Rating: No user ratings available in the sourced data

- 55″ Mini LED backlight (higher peak brightness & contrast)
- 4K UHD, 60 Hz, LG webOS Smart TV
- Includes white-frame bundle and an HDMI cable

Why it works: Mini LED technology delivers brighter highlights and deeper blacks than standard LED, giving a more cinematic feel. The included designer frame and cable add instant style and convenience.

What to watch for: The premium price reflects the advanced backlight; if you're watching mostly SDR content or have a tight budget, the extra cost may not be justified.

Which TV Should You Buy?
