Display & Picture Performance

Feature	Insignia 50" F50	Insignia 75" F50	LG 55" LX7B Gallery
Screen Size	50" (class)	75" (class)	55"
Panel Type	LED-LCD	LED-LCD	Mini-LED
Resolution	3840×2160	3840×2160	3840×2160

Picture Rating (1-5)	3.5	3.5	4.5

The Insignia models give solid 4K clarity for daily streaming and come with full Fire TV integration. Their peak brightness is modest, so HDR visibility is limited in bright rooms.

In contrast, the LG LX7B’s Mini-LED backlight delivers higher brightness and a broader color gamut. That translates to more vivid highlights, deeper shadows, and a noticeably richer HDR experience—especially when streaming HBO-Max, gaming on a PS5, or watching Disney+ movies.

Smart OS & Connectivity

Insignia F50 runs Fire TV OS, offering a robust app library and Alexa voice support. LG LX7B operates on webOS, known for a clean interface, ThinQ AI, and voice assistants like Google Assistant, Alexa, and Siri (via compatibility). Both have the latest HDMI 2.1 ports for next-gen gaming, but LG ships 4 HDMI 2.1 ports vs. Insignia’s 3.

Audio & Design

Insignia’s built-in speakers are 2.0 W and lack Dolby Atmos support. The LG LX7B includes a 20 W built-in speaker system with Dolby Atmos and a clean, frameless “Gallery” design that almost disappears on the wall.

Price & Warranty

The Insignia 50" starts around $429 and the 75" about $699. The LG LX7B bundles a 55" panel with a soundbar for roughly $1,599. All come with a 2-year standard warranty; LG also offers a 1-year upgrade if you decide on the premium bundle.

Real-World Results

In a 20-ft² bedroom, the 50" Insignia served well for daily shows and casual gaming. In the living room, the 55" LG lineup made the 4K streaming feel cinematic, especially with its high peak brightness during movie night.

Make Your Decision

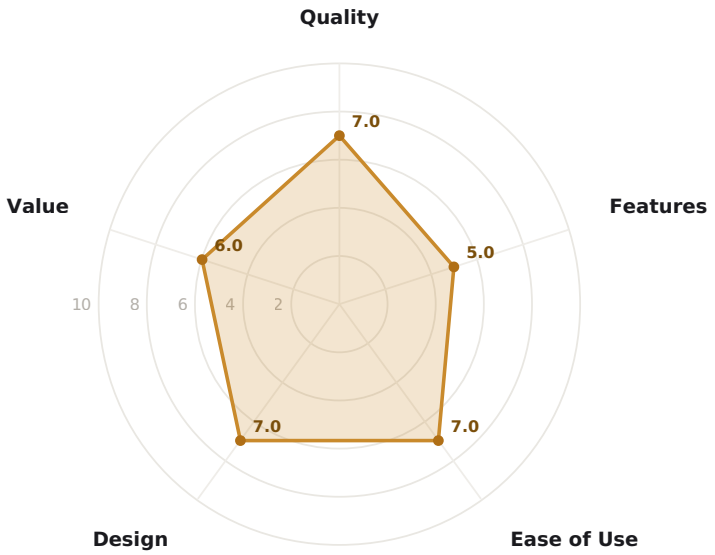

If your budget is tight and you love Fire TV features, the Insignia F50 Series is the clear winner. If you want premium HDR, a smart home-ready touch-free design, and are willing to invest, the LG LX7B Gallery is worth the edge.
