Picture quality: Insignia LED 4K vs LG Mini LED

All three Insignia models use direct-LED backlights with standard 4K UHD resolution. They deliver bright images suitable for daytime viewing, and owner feedback notes good colour accuracy for the price point. The 50-inch and 75-inch sets support HDR10, which improves contrast in compatible content.

LG’s 55-inch LX7B steps up to a Mini LED panel with hundreds of tiny LEDs grouped into zones for local dimming. This allows deeper blacks and higher peak brightness than typical edge-lit LED TVs. In practice, the Mini LED can produce noticeably better shadow detail in dark scenes and brighter highlights for HDR content.
