Why comparing robot vacuums matters in 2026

Robot vacuums have evolved from simple sweepers to multi-function cleaners that can vacuum, mop, empty their own bins and learn your home’s layout. In 2026, price points vary widely and features like auto-empty docks or AI navigation can add hundreds of dollars. A clear side-by-side comparison helps you avoid paying for capabilities you won’t use while ensuring you get the performance that matches your home size, flooring type and pet-hair challenges.

What key factors should I consider when choosing a robot vacuum in 2026?

- Suction power – measured in airflow (CFM) or water lift; higher numbers pick up more debris, especially on carpets.
- Mopping capability – a built-in water tank and microfiber pad let the robot handle light spills and sticky residues.
- Auto-empty dock – transfers collected dirt to a larger bin, reducing maintenance to once every 30-60 days.
- Navigation and mapping – laser-based (LiDAR) or camera-based SLAM creates accurate maps, enables room-specific cleaning and virtual barriers.
- App and voice control – scheduling, no-go zones and status alerts via smartphone or Alexa/Google Assistant.
- Price and ongoing costs – look at the upfront price, dock price (if sold separately) and cost of replacement filters or mop pads.

What does the iRobot Roomba 115X Combo Robot Vacuum & Mop with AutoEmpty Dock offer?
