Why a side-by-side comparison matters

Today’s TVs pack LED backlighting, Mini-LED zones, 4K upscaling, HDR10+, Dolby Vision and voice assistants into one price point. Without a clear comparison you risk paying for overlapping features or picking a size that doesn’t fit your viewing distance.

Picture quality & technology: LED vs Mini-LED vs 4K/HDR

LED TVs use a uniform backlight and typically deliver 250-300 nits, fine for dim to moderately lit rooms. Mini-LED adds hundreds of local dimming zones, boosting peak brightness to 450-500 nits and improving contrast. All 4K models share 3840×2160 resolution; HDR10+ and Dolby Vision expand colour and highlight detail beyond standard HDR10.

How to decide – your action plan

1. Measure your viewing distance: 1.5× screen width for 4K, 2× for HD.
2. Match brightness to room lighting: >300 nits for bright spaces, 250-300 nits for controlled light.
3. Choose smart platform: Fire TV for Alexa-centric homes, webOS for LG ecosystem and Apple AirPlay.
4. Set budget: Insignia F50 models start under $350; LG LX7B begins near $650.
