Performance in the Real World

All three models brag about strong suction, but the Shark AI Ultra steals the show on deep-cleaning hardwood and rugs, thanks to its dual-mode brush head. If you own a honey-combed pet hair problem, the Roomba's runtime (120 minutes) and built-in robot mop make it an excellent all-rounder—especially when paired with the AutoEmpty dock for a weekend-away strategy.

Price vs. Value

The Roomba 115X Combo delivers the most bang for the buck if you need the dock; at just $199.99 you get de-dusting, mopping, and auto-emptying, which many users would otherwise pay for separately. The dock-less version at $139.99 is perfect for small apartments. The Shark AI Ultra sits in the mid-tier and offers a slightly higher suction rating, so you'll pay a premium if that extra power justifies your floor type.
