Why Compare TVs Before Buying in 2026?

4K is now the baseline, and Mini-LED technology is raising the bar for contrast and HDR performance. If you pick the wrong size or panel, you could end up with a washed-out image in a sunlit living room or spend money on extras you never touch. A side-by-side look at today’s top offers lets you match performance to your actual viewing habits and budget.

Key Decision Factors for TV Buyers in 2026

- Screen size: Measure your viewing distance. A 50″ fits 6-8 ft, a 75″ shines beyond 9 ft, and a 55″ works best at 8-10 ft.
- Display technology: Standard LED gives good brightness; Mini-LED (LG LX7B) adds local dimming for deeper blacks and richer HDR.
- Smart platform: Fire TV (Insignia) brings Alexa voice control and a massive app library; webOS (LG) offers a clean interface and LG ThinQ AI.
- HDMI/connectivity: Look for at least HDMI 2.1 for 4K@120Hz gaming. All three models include HDMI 2.0 ports, and the LG bundle throws in an extra HDMI cable.
- Price-to-performance: Compare cost per inch and the added value of voice remotes, bundled accessories, and warranty length.
