Why compare these three TVs in 2026?

With 4K now standard and smart platforms evolving quickly, picking the right television means balancing screen size, budget, picture technology, and ecosystem compatibility. The three models featured here represent distinct points on that spectrum: an ultra-affordable 50-inch Fire TV, a big-screen 75-inch Fire TV for movie nights, and a design-focused LG Gallery Mini-LED that doubles as wall art. Understanding where each excels helps you avoid overpaying for features you won't use or missing out on a better viewing experience.

Key decision factors for TV buyers in 2026

- Screen size and viewing distance: A 50-inch set works well in bedrooms or small living rooms (about 6-8 ft away), while a 75-inch panel needs at least 9-10 ft to avoid eye strain.
- Picture technology: Standard LED panels deliver good brightness for daytime viewing; Mini-LED adds local dimming for deeper blacks and higher contrast, ideal for dark-room movies.
- Smart platform: Fire TV integrates Alexa voice control and a vast app library; LG's webOS (used in the Gallery line) offers a clean UI and Apple AirPlay 2 support.
- Design and mounting: The LG Gallery model includes a white frame that mimics a picture frame, allowing flush wall mounting without a visible bezel.
- Price and value: Holiday-season discounts in 2026 have pushed the Insignia 50-inch below $160, the 75-inch under $360, and the LG Gallery around $900.

Insignia 50-inch F50 Series LED 4K UHD Smart Fire TV

The Insignia 50-inch F50 Series (ASIN B0F19KLHG3) is a direct-lit LED TV with 4K resolution (3840×2160), HDR10 support, and a 60 Hz refresh rate. It runs Amazon's Fire TV OS, giving access to Netflix, Prime Video, Disney+, HBO Max, and thousands of Alexa-controlled skills. As of October 02, 2026, its price is $159.99 (down from an original $299.99), and it has accumulated over 14 000 customer ratings averaging 4.3 stars.

LG 55-inch LX7B Gallery Mini-LED TV

LG 55" LX7B Gallery Mini LED 4K Smart TV White Frame Bundle + HDMI

LG's Gallery line treats the TV as a piece of art. The 55-inch LX7B uses Mini-LED backlighting with local dimming for deep blacks and vibrant contrast, covered by a slim white frame that lets you mount it flush to the wall like a picture. It runs webOS, offering a clean UI, Apple AirPlay 2, and access to major streaming apps. At roughly $900, it bridges the gap between budget sets and high-end OLEDs.

Which TV should you choose?

If you need a secondary set for a bedroom or dorm, the 50-inch Insignia gives you smart features at the lowest price. For family movie nights or a living-room centerpiece, the 75-inch Insignia delivers immersive size without breaking the bank. When design matters and you want the best contrast in a dark-room setting, the LG Gallery Mini-LED is worth the extra investment. Match the size to your viewing distance, weigh the smart platform you prefer, and click the links above to lock in today’s holiday-season prices.
