Why a Side-by-Side Comparison Is a Must-Have in 2026

Screen sizes this year have jumped from 32″ to 75″ and tech ranges from standard LED to mini-LED. Buyers often feel swamped. A clear, side-by-side rundown breaks down the numbers—resolution, HDR, refresh rate, smart OS, and price per inch—so you can match the TV to your room size, viewing distance, and budget without the confusion.

Key Decision Criteria Every 2026 Buyer Should Measure

- Resolution: Native 4K is now the baseline. Look for pure 3840×2160 panels rather than upscaled LEDs.
- HDR: HDR10, HLG, and Dolby Vision lift brightness and colour. Mini-LED panels get the most out of Dolby Vision.
- Refresh Rate: 60 Hz works for movies; 120 Hz delivers buttery-smooth sports and gaming.
- Smart Platform: Fire TV gives Alexa integration; LG's WebOS has a cleaner UI and a wider app library.
- Connectivity: HDMI 2.1, eARC, Wi-Fi 6E, and USB-C keep the TV future-ready.
- Room Size / Viewing Distance: Aim for a screen that covers 30° of your visual field for immersive viewing.
- Audio: Built-in speakers are often quiet. Consider a soundbar if dialogue clarity matters.

Strengths & Weaknesses of the Top Choices

Model	Strengths	Weaknesses

LG 55″ Mini-LED	Mini-LED backlight, 15-stop local dimming, high contrast; premium white-frame design.	Higher cost ($899.99); WebOS has fewer niche apps; needs a soundbar for best sound.
Insignia 75″ F50	Huge 75″ screen, same Fire TV ecosystem, excellent price-to-size at $359.99.	Same LED limits as 50″; large panels may show uniformity variations.
